

ISO 27001 LEADERSHIP TRAINING

General

Under the ISO 27001 standard, special responsibilities are mandated to an organization's leadership. These responsibilities are not relevant to regular employees, and therefore are not typically included in general information security training. As a result, this information must be formally conveyed to members of the leadership team, for which evidence of it must be generated as a program record for inspection by certification auditors.

Leadership Training

As organizational leaders' time is valuable and extremely limited, educational efforts on information security must be refined and focused for this audience.

CIMA has experience developing and delivering training to organizational Board of Directors and senior leadership teams. Our training is focused on relevant topics with discussion time to answer any questions they may have.

Leveraging Opportunities

Because this audience's time is a high-value commodity with limited opportunity, we typically recommend leveraging this open window to include presentation and voting on the information security program charter, mitigation plan (strategy), and supporting budget proposal.

Let us help you get all the approvals you need during one open window.

What You Get

When engaging CIMA to facilitate this effort, you will receive a documented:

1. meeting agenda, including a statement of the meeting objective and a list of agenda items; and
2. presentation material, with all slides covered during the presentation.
