INFORMATION SECURITY INCIDENT MANAGEMENT

General

For small and medium sized organization, incident management is not something you need to do very often. When an incident does occur, like being hacked, it quickly become overwhelming for untrained or experienced managers.

As a goal, you need to respond quickly and instill confidence in all those that are involved, to maintain order and control of the situation.

You also need to know when, and to whom information needs to be communicated to.

Incident Management

CIMA offers contract-based information security incident management services.

When the unthinkable happens, you need an experienced incident manager leading both the technical and managerial teams to ensure an efficient and effective response.

If you don't have an information security incident response process in place at the time we are called in, we'll bring one with us, and provide access to all authorized participants of your Information Security Incident Response Team (iSIRT).

In addition to providing the incident management service, we will also document the incident in an official report format to ensure your have a record of the event and actions taken.

Following the incident, if we introduced our process, we'll come back to customize it in quieter times.

What You Get

An information security incident management specialist on-demand to support and lead your iSIRT, a documented incident report, and a post-incident root cause analysis report.
